In recent years, Over-the-Top (OTT) advertising has gained significant traction in the marketing world. Traditionally used for B2C (Business-to-Consumer) marketing, OTT platforms such as Hulu, Amazon Prime, and YouTube have opened doors for B2B (Business-to-Business) brands to reach highly targeted audiences. With the surge in digital streaming and the decline of traditional TV, OTT ads provide a powerful way for B2B marketers to generate leads, build brand awareness, and engage decision-makers.

Here's how B2B companies can effectively leverage OTT ads for lead generation.

1. Targeting Decision-Makers on Streaming Platforms

OTT platforms provide advertisers with sophisticated targeting options, allowing B2B marketers to reach specific business audiences based on factors such as job title, industry, company size, geographic location, and even behavior. By using data-driven insights, you can ensure your ads are being shown to key decision-makers, such as C-suite executives, department heads, or purchasing managers.

This hyper-targeting allows for more efficient ad spend by ensuring that your messaging is reaching those who are most likely to influence purchasing decisions in a business context.

Best Practices:

- Use platforms that offer robust demographic and behavioral targeting options.
- Leverage first-party and third-party data to narrow your audience to business professionals.
- Consider platforms like LinkedIn, YouTube, or niche industry streaming channels where your target audience is likely to spend their time.

2. Craft Engaging, Solution-Oriented Content

Unlike traditional display or banner ads, OTT ads offer a visually engaging format. The key to successful B2B OTT advertising lies in creating content that speaks directly to your audience's pain points while showcasing the solution your product or service provides.

Given that business buyers are often looking for solutions to enhance efficiency, save costs, or drive growth, your ad should focus on the value your company offers. Use testimonials, case studies, or success stories to show how your product has made a difference for other businesses.

Content Ideas:

- Highlight how your solution improves workflows or solves specific business challenges.
- Use animated or live-action videos to visually demonstrate product features or use cases.
- Incorporate real-world examples of businesses benefitting from your solution.

3. Leverage Retargeting for Enhanced Lead Conversion

One of the most powerful aspects of OTT advertising is its ability to track viewers and enable retargeting strategies. If a potential lead watches your ad but doesn't immediately convert, you can continue reaching them across other devices, such as smartphones, tablets, or desktops, through display ads or social media.

By integrating OTT ads into a broader digital marketing strategy, you create a seamless experience that moves potential clients down the sales funnel. Retargeting allows you to nurture leads by continually exposing them to your brand and reinforcing your value proposition.

Key Strategies for Retargeting:

- Use OTT platforms in combination with other digital channels like email, search, or display ads to stay top-of-mind.
- Serve retargeting ads with personalized messaging or offer additional information after a viewer interacts with your initial OTT ad.
- Track interactions and engagement to segment your audience and deliver more targeted follow-up ads.

4. Integrate OTT with Lead Capture Tools

For OTT ads to directly generate leads, they need to be integrated with lead capture tools. By incorporating clear calls-to-action (CTAs) in your ads, you can direct viewers to a dedicated landing page, where they can download a whitepaper, register for a webinar, or sign up for a free trial.

To make the process seamless, ensure the landing page is optimized for mobile viewing, given that many OTT viewers are likely to use mobile devices. Additionally, offering something of value, such as exclusive content or early access to a demo, can encourage viewers to take immediate action.

CTA and Lead Capture Best Practices:

- Include a strong, actionable CTA in your ad, such as "Download our free guide" or "Schedule a demo today."
- Use a simple, easy-to-remember URL or QR code to drive viewers to a landing page.
- Make sure your lead capture forms are user-friendly and optimized for mobile devices.

5. Measure ROI with Data and Analytics

B2B marketers need to measure the success of their OTT campaigns by tracking various key performance indicators (KPIs). These include lead generation metrics such as clicks, landing page visits, form submissions, and conversions. Most OTT platforms offer analytics tools that provide insights into how well your ads are performing and who is engaging with them.

With the ability to track views, completion rates, and post-view actions, you can gain valuable insights into what resonates with your audience and refine your messaging accordingly. By continually optimizing based on data, you can improve the effectiveness of your OTT campaigns and ensure you're maximizing your return on investment (ROI).

Important Metrics to Track:

- View-through rate (VTR): The percentage of viewers who watch your ad to completion.
- Conversion rate: How many viewers take action after seeing your ad (e.g., filling out a form or scheduling a call).
- Cost per lead (CPL): The total cost of the ad campaign divided by the number of leads generated.
- Engagement metrics: Click-throughs to landing pages or engagement on subsequent retargeting ads.

Conclusion

OTT advertising offers a tremendous opportunity for B2B marketers to reach their target audience in an engaging, non-intrusive way. By leveraging precise targeting, creating compelling content, integrating retargeting strategies, and capturing leads through clear CTAs, B2B companies can use OTT ads to drive lead generation and foster lasting business relationships. With data analytics tools to track performance and optimize campaigns, OTT advertising can become a key driver of growth in B2B marketing strategies.
